

GOSHEN OFFICIALS OPPOSE KU KLUX

Police Interfere in Attempt of Organizer to form New Klan.

GOSHEN, Ind. Sept. 28.—(Special.)—When three organizers of the Ku Klux Klan arrived in Goshen yesterday and rented the Lincoln theater for the purpose of organizing this city and vicinity, Edward A. Rimpler, chief of police, warned them that such a gathering would not be permitted under any circumstances.

Oscar Hansen, manager of the theater, upon learning that the police had forbidden the meeting as outlined, refused the use of the playhouse for the purpose intended and the organizers finally gave up the attempt.

Several weeks ago, Walter Bartholomew of Three Rivers, Mich., formerly of Goshen, Warsaw and Mifflord, and a former policeman, came here and attempted to hold Ku Klux Klan discussions on the streets. He was informed by the chief of police that such meetings would not be allowed and he left town.

Bartholomew had been here as a solo singer with a woman who lectured in a local church and attacked the Catholic church in such manner that great indignation resulted. It became necessary for police to go to the church. Soon after Bartholomew launched his Ku Klux Klan campaign here. Since then but little was heard of the project until the three organizers arrived.

The Evolution Of The Flapper

Blood Stained Cap Wins $37,500 Insurance Suit

MORRIS, Ill., Sept. 28.—A blood-stained cap won $37,500 for Mrs. Maude Ely of Wilmington, Ill., in her suit against an insurance company in the circuit court here. The cap was the only evidence Mrs. Ely had that her husband, Dr. W. R. Ely, formerly of Gibson City, had been murdered ten years ago.

BY MARIAN HALE.
Behold the transformation wrought by the reformation of the flapper!

At the left you recognize the close-up rear view of what has been the most-talked-of issue since the war, the bobbed head—in its natural state.

Passing on, you see what seems to be a lovely head of hair, done in a sweet, womanly way.

It's the same girl and the same hair, with the addition of some more in the way of a switch, designed particularly for the grown-out period.

Picture three shows how elaborate a structure may be erected on a bobbed foundation if one is equipped with a chignon or so, and a bandeau.

At the right you see the way the successor to the flapper will frame her face this season.

Madame Louise Berthelon of New York and Paris, who erected these coiffures, supplied the why-when-where element of the story as she added hair and punctuated it with hairpins.

"With the long lines and Grecian draperies of this season, you can't have a large head and a short neck," she said. "Bobbed hair was always all right in front, but not in the back, because it hid that line of beauty from the side between the back of the ear and the nape of the neck."

"The beauty of bobbed hair lay in its youthfulness. A woman could lose ten years in a barber shop. So this season we will keep the soft line about the face, and arrange the front hair quite as if it were bobbed, but it must be dressed in the back and the rouged lobe of the ear must show."

"The bobbed one buys one of the new switches which is joined in the center and works both ways. She pins this to the back of her head securely, then pins her own bobbed locks over this. She brings the ends about and coils them over each ear, keeping the bobbed ends carefully concealed beneath the coils.

"This makes a flat coiffure, not too stiff for her hats, but harmonizing with this season's gowns."

"If the hair is thin about the face one may add bangs, or little fluffy side pieces which I call 'dimples.' There are detachable chignons of curls and puffs, which may be fastened on securely for evening."

"Bandeaux, and flowers will be worn in the hair, but the wide 'headache band' of last season is not correct. In using switches, be sure to show a little growing hair about the neckline to remove any suggestion of artificiality."

Madame Louise is delighted that bobbed hair is no longer stylish.

"It was never a beautiful style, but what was worse, it was very bad for the hair. It kept it from becoming long and even, and the continued cutting has been known to cause baldness," she concluded.

New Giant Bomber Will Wipe Out Entire Cities

DAYTON, O., Sept. 28.—(By U. P.)—Workmen today began mounting artillery on the decks of the Bunting bomber, super-dreadnaught of the skies, under construction at Wilbur Wright field. The world's largest triplane, equipped with radio phones, will take the air Nov. 30. Its trial trip, if successful, will mark the world's greatest achievement in heavier-than-air war craft, it is said. Thus far, all construction has gone forward under ban of strictest secrecy.

Authorities of Wilbur Wright field declared the giant plane will be capable of wiping out entire cities with its ten ton bomb or aerial torpedo. Several batteries of machine guns, giving protection from all sides, and two 75 MM cannons of the type used in the battle of the Marne, will make the plane the most formidable ever constructed. It will carry 2,000 gallons of gasoline. The six Liberty motors, capable of developing 2,700 horsepower, will burn 180 gallons of gasoline an hour. No less than four men can handle the ship in the air. The plane, which will be capable of flying from New York to San Francisco with one stop at Omaha, Neb., is being built for the United States government. All work on the plane is under the direct supervision of a New Jersey contractor, Bunting, designer of the craft, is an Englishman.
